

Janessa Quitano

Astumbo Elementary

11 years old

Room: B104

How to Go Green and Read

Hi my name is Janessa Quitano and I'm going to tell you how to go green and read. One way you can go green and read is by giving away books that you've already read instead of keeping it on an old shelf. Like to a family member or a friend. That's a way to help the environment.

I think another way you can go green and read is by putting recycling bins out in the school hallways. Like separating it for plastic bottles, cans, and used paper. You can also go green by using fluorescent light bulbs to read under. That way you can save energy in terms of gas to produce power.

Another way is by telling book publishers to use a different kind of ink for books. The reason this is important is because people throw books on the ground and the ink will poison plants or animals on the ground.

You can go green by buying reading books made from recycled paper, including recycled notebooks as well. That will help you help the environment by saving paper. These are a few examples of how you can go green and read.

Thank you.

